BEAUTIFUL DECORATIVE EFFECTS IN BURNT WOOD ETCHING.

Needful-Attractive Panel Work.

(Copyright, 1893, by American Press Associa tion.] Poker work or burnt wood etching is productive of the most fascinating results in decorative effects and is being enthusiastically seized upon by the woman who believed in the "house beautiful." While one of the best artists in New York is giving his entire time to demonstrating what artistic effect can be got from poker work, it is still within reach of the amateur who has the smallest grain of artistic ability. The difference is that the artist makes his own designs and draws them on the wood with a free hand. The amateur who is not an experienced draftsman should never do that. But he can easily find charming designs everywhere in the art magazines and journals, and these can be transferred to the piece of wood he wishes to decorate. Often patterns for wood carving, china painting, water colors or even embroidery can be used in this way.

A BOX COVER.

Bold figures or conventionalized designs having simple outlines and very little shading are best for beginners.

Such beautiful things as I have seen done in this poker work! Some of the pieces looked like rare old carved ivory and others like fine sepia pictures. It is charming for panels over chimney pieces and doors and lends itself equally well for cabinets, boxes, antique chairs, book covers, letter cases, portfolio covers, glove boxes and picture frames.

An industrious little woman I know of is busy making panels wherewith to decorate the living room of a new cottage which is being built among the mountains. This is the way she is do-

THE INSTRUMENT.

Over the two low front windows are to be panels, one in a straggling brier rose pattern and the other in grape leaves, fruit and tendrils.

Now, let me tell you how she does it She gets a nice, smoothly planed board of basswood if it is to be a panel. On this she fastens with artist's tacks a sheet of tracing paper. Over the paper is laid the design, also fastened securely. Then with a tracing tool she goes carefully over the entire design, being particular not to slight a line or a dot anywhere. She removes the pattern and paper, and the wood is ready for burning.

You can use the old fashioned poker, or the iron points made for the purpose if you wish, but there is much delay in cooling and reheating, and the work is apt to be uneven in tone, so this young woman who is decorating her cottage uses the platinum point and the small machine which keeps it all the time at red heat.

One of the worst trials of beginners are the unsightly dots at the ends of lines. These come from allowing the point to rest at the finish of a stroke. A redhot iron burns a hole instantly, and you must remember to lift it the instant you get to the end.

Shading is done by running the side of the point lightly along the surface of the wood. If you wish a very light shade, do nor touch the wood at all, but just skim lightly over it. The slight scorching will produce a lovely brown tint.

THE PUNISHMENT OF CHILDREN.

A Difficult Problem Which Calls For Care ful Consideration.

There are as many theories upon this subject as there are children upon whom to practice them. Nor is this to be wondered at when each little one differs from another, so that each careful mother has to fall back upon her own judgment or experience and finds she cannot rely on that of the wisest of her contemporaries. Very few children never require to be punished at all. The disposition has to be altogether taken into account in considering the method of that punishment.

There are rare natures, brutal from their infancy, which demand stern, strict accounting. Many others are so morbidly sensitive that a word of condemnation will go all the necessary lengths. And most small people belong to a happy, normal condition midway between these two, which requires a firm, light hand upon the reins.

To all children justice appeals with irresistible force, and injustice is one of their blackest crimes. If the former, how is that purpose served by an act of flagrant injustice? And you admit that it is unjust, because you "can't strike a child" when just and calm. A decently administered whipping, with a moral to adorn the sting, is one thing; cuffing and slaping, or angry beating, is quite another

There are other punishments quite as hard to bear, but more dignified and seemly, which teach the world's great lesson of cause and effect. The difference would be that, while it is clear business with the British noble cabmen and milliners, the American society girls would take up employment as a mere fad.

The Small Account Taken of Daughters Among Millionaires.

The will of Colonel Elliott F. Shepard calls attention anew to the little value placed on daughters by many rich men.

But owning and bossing the concern. But not a word about the Shepard daughters. One of them is married, but what about the others? They may marry, stay single, eat their hearts out for want of occupation, or take to church and benevolent work, which seems to be the only resource left to rich women who never marry. The Shepard daughters, poor girls, are as utterly ignored in their father's expressed hopes and ambitions as if they had never been born. This is in line with Vanderbilt traditions. When W. Healing Waters and Restful Sur-H. died, he left his children $11,500,000 apiece. After that and various other bequests had been paid W. H. Vanderbilt divided the residue of his estate between his sons, William K. and Cornelius. This residue a recent writer declares he knows for certain to have been MONDAY, MAY 15, 1893. about $200,000,000. The Astors portion off daughters in the same way and leave the real fortune to their sons. Jay Gould is a notable and praiseworthy exception to the usual multimillionaire. Whatever his failings and sins were, he at least gave credit to woman for having brains and sense. He divided his property equally among his children. making to his son George suitable recompense for the fidelity with which he had served his father's fortunes, but he also left the homestead and its contents to Helen in her own right, and in the management of the millions after his death Helen Gould was to be consulted as well as George and Edwin. With the care of the younger Gould children and the equal management of the Gould es- Hog & Poultry Remedy tate, Helen will have something to fill her heart and brain, even if she should not marry. For this provision of his will I honor Jay Gould. It is a piece of miserable, pitiable vanity, the ignoring of daughters in millionaires' wills. If daughters marry, they will change their names and thus cannot perpetuate the old man's millions in connection with his old man's millions in connection with his name, and he wants his name attached to his millions even after he is dead and turned to dust a thousand years.

Another instance of the sad consequences of cultivating emotions instead of brains among our sex is shown in the loss of life at the burning of Mr. Joseph Jefferson's beautiful home on Buzzard bay. The man in charge of the place line vapor touched the furnace there would be a frightful explosion. "Run, Description:—Silver Tip was foaled May 5, 1888, 1s a beautiful red bay, 15% hands high, fine mane and tail, which he carries to perfection. We claim tor this young stallion that he has more natural style and action than any stallion in the country—in a word, he is a model in form and as a saddle horse. It can be readily seen that this is one of the fanciest bred saddle stallions in the State, with the very best saddle blood coursing through his veins, backed up on both sides by thoroughbreds. In addition to this stallion's saddle qualities, he has a bold, open trot, which eminently recommends him as a sire of high class combined horses. We can readily recommend him as a fine breeder, as this will be his third season and his colts will compare favorably with the get of any horse in the country.

Blood Cheif Jr., by Blood Cheif 792; 1st dam Lizzie Gaugh, by Washington Denmark; 2d dam Old Jennie, by Robert Bruce (thoroughbred).

Coleman's Eureka, the grandsire of Eureka Cheif, was by Young's Morgan dam by Boston & cleman's Eureka that founded as great a family of saddle horses as any stallion that ever made a season in Kentucky, viz: Coleman's Eureka. Coleman's Eureka was never beaten in saddle and combined rings, and he imparted to his get size, color, style and finish. Eureka, though a young horse, has won about 50 blue ribbons at Kentucky Fairs. Eureka Cheif has never been shown, was not broken to saddle until last year; but judging from his size, style, color and action, we predict for him the same success that has attended his sire and grandsire in show rings. His dam Mag, by Blood Cheif Jr., was a winner in all classes and by a horse that never sired a mean one. This horse is bred right to sire horses that will command the attention of all intelligent horsemen. He is good individually and can show for himself in any company. EVERY FRIDAY.

It is very gratifying indeed to observe that the Commercial-Gazette, which is never so happy as when abusing him, has at last had the courage to commend something said by Mr. Cleveland. Speaking of his address before touching the electric button, which set the machinery of the World's Fair in motion, it says pointedly and truthfully: The president's address was brief, earnest, well befitting the occasion and withal deeply patriotic. Mindful of the presence of foreign representatives in which he stood- and in the midst of 'results accomplished by efforts which have been exerted longer than ours in the field of man's improvement,' he did not hesitate to call attention to the benefits of popular education, to 'the unparalleled advancement and wonderful accomplishments of a young nation,' and 'the triumphs of a vigorous, self-reliant and independent people.' Brave words were these and among the best the president has ever spoken.

THE Lexington Leader celebrated the fifth anniversary of its birth by issuing a 40-page souvenir edition, which would do credit to any office in the United States. It is printed on book paper and besides a photographic reproduction in miniature of its first number printed May 1, 1888, it has cuts of its new build- but not inebriate, and our prohibition ing, its fine Cox Duplex press and many friends can at last have an inning at the of prominent men and places. A complete history of manylof the varied interests of the city is given, making it a most valuable sheet for future reference. The paper is a monument to the wonderful energy of Editor Sam J. Roberts, who almost by his individual exertions has succeeded in building up the best paying newspaper property in the Capital of the Blue-Grass. We congratulate him and hope the star off the destiny that he is working out for himself will always be in the ascendency.

COL. SAM M. SEMI-WEEKLY INTERIOR JOURNAL HAUNTED BY A CRIME.

By CHARLES B. LEWIS (M. QUAD).

[Copyright, 1893, by Charles B. Lewis,1 [I was one of the coroner's jury impaneled in the case of an old man found drowned, and as soon as the mud had been washed off his face I recognized the unfortunate as a mendicant who had told me his story several days before.

It was my intention to graduate as a lawyer, but while preparing myself for college a circumstance happened to change my plans and the current of my life. Eight or ten of the leading citizens of the town in which I lived formed a stock company and erected a large factory, and when ready to operate I was appointed cashier. I was then only 20 years old. Although my father was one of the stockholders, it was not on this account that I received the appointment. I had reasons to believe that he opposed it on the ground that I was too young and lacking in business experience, but at the same time he must have been pleased at my preferment.

I was a popular young man. Everybody was my friend, and everybody was kind enough to say that I had a brilliant future before me. Some were disappointed when I took the place offered me, declaring that nature had intended me for a lawyer, but others insisted that I would develop business talents which would make me a wealthy man before I reached the age of 30. It is very pleasant for a young man to realize that he is popular and that everybody wishes him well, and in my case at least it did not result in throwing me off my balance. Before entering on my duties the president of the concern invited me to an interview one day and said:

'James, you have been elected to a very responsible position, and it is usual in such cases to exact a bond. You come from an honest family. All of us believe you to be an honest, straightforward young man. There are a dozen men in town willing to go on your bond, and for these reasons we feel secure without any. We shall trust you implicitly. All of us have known you from childhood, and we have no fear that you will go wrong."

Trust me? Why not? Had I found a dollar bill on the street I should not have rested content until making every effort to restore it to the loser. I could not remember of ever having told a lie. I regarded a thief with even more horror than a murderer. To have made me furnish a bond would have been only business in one sense, and yet in another it would have implied a distrust of my honesty which would have been gall and wormwood to me. Am I egotistical? No. Each one knows himself the best. if men truthfully declare themselves thieves, robbers and embezzlers, and the daily court records prove that they do, then why criticise others for asserting that they cannot be tempted to steal?

For three years all went well in the factory. As a matter of fact, I did develop a talent for financiering, and those who had predicted well for me were not disappointed. After the first year the capacity was increased, and at the end of the third year we were able to declare a dividend of 12 per cent. That jumped our stock way above par. In the three years my salary was increased three times, and the semiannual examination of my books and accounts proved everything right to a cent. At the beginning of the fourth year, when there was another issue of stock, I was presented with $5,000 worth and the thanks of the board of directors for my untiring vigilance and sterling honesty. Wasn't that a thing to be proud of? I had a social standing second to none, and during the Boston, last month of the third year I was engaged to the beautiful and accomplished daughter of our president. When I went into his private office one day to broach the subject, he met me with:

"There, James, I know what you have come for, and I frankly confess that I am pleased and satisfied. Nellie is one of the best girls in all this world, and 1 know you will make her happy."

Taken all around, could any young man have asked for more. I was in the path leading to wealth and honor, and I could not blame other young men who envied me and sarcastically referred to me as one of fortune's favorites. The beginning of my downward career was a very simple circumstance, or rather two circumstances in one.

In looking over the safe one day came across a package of $500, which had been mislaid by my assistant. It was just after an examination of my books, and the examination had been so much a matter of form that this money, paid in weeks before, had not been missed. You may say we had rather a loose system. I admit it. Find me a place where the cashier is not under bonds and is implicitly trusted, and I'll show you that same careless system. Things are careless because he is strictly honest, or because he is dishonest and wants to cover up shortages. The finding of that money was no temptation to embezzling it.

On that very day, however, one of our best customers in New York, who had happened that way almost by accident, paid the factory a visit. He had just cleared $28,000 in a pork deal and naturally wanted to talk about it. I had kept clear of all sorts of speculation, but when the man had explained his deal to me and told me of other speculation in which he had cleared handsome sums he started the fever which proved my destruction. He did not advise me one way or the other, and I never blamed him. Had I asked his advice he would probably have warned me not to risk a

I did not wait to think the matter over. I had invested my savings in real estate, and of course I could not sell my stock without questions being asked. 1 would take the $500 I have referred to. It never entered my mind that I might lose it. I should win, of course, and the money would be returned to the cash account. I called it's temporary loan from the factory. After I had invested it I a scoundrel deserving of prison bars. had twinges of conscience. It wasn't trust, and I felt degraded.

ing point. I should have replaced the money and taken warning. I believe it was the worst thing that could have happened to me that that $500 made me there? Of course not. The fact that I had hit it right satisfied me that I had the necessary nerve and acumen, and I deal, but on the third was wiped out. You can guess what followed. Up to the first day of June on my fourth year I had embezzled $10,000 of the company. My books would be examined on the 1st of July and the shortage discovered. Flight always follows embezzlement if the criminal can get not find a man who even remembered away. Robbery precedes flight if there is anything left to lay hands on. I had $5,000 worth of real estate, and I could ence. I was dead to the world. Here have borrowed $5,000 in cash almost without comment. Why didn't I do it and save myself? It never occured to me to do so. When you have taken the first step, the descent is rapid. Your integrity put under arrest and punished by the is shattered, and you plan to complete your ruin rather than to restore yourself.

It is wonderful how rapidly the ruin of a man can be effected under what may be termed favorable circumstances. In the course of four or five months my New York and got aboard a sailing vessel bound for England. About half of the money I took belonged to outsiders who had it in the safe for security. And what did I gain by it all? the circumstances, that with my capital I would go into business abroad and in time make restitution.

While the captain of the vessel had taken me as a passenger, I soon discovered that he looked on me as a suspect. The company did not seek my arrest, but even before we sighted the shores of England I felt like a hunted wolf. I remained in Liverpool a month. In two instances I sought to go into business. I had the money, but who was I-where were my credentials-who could vouch for me? I know that a detective followed me for a couple of days. I know that the people at the hotel thought me

When I went to complain, I was asked to identify myself-what I was doing abroadif the money belonged to me. I could not admit that I was an absconder, and therefore the robber was allowed to enjoy his plunder unmolested. In Berlin I met Americans from New York, Chicago, Philadelphia and St. Louis-that is, I could have met them, but did not dare to. I did not even dare to admit that I was an American. I became acquainted with a German inventor and loaned him $3,000 on what appeared to be good security. I sprang to my feet so suddenly as to upset the table before me, and no doubt every line of my face betrayed fear and guilt. near Stein's pass, the birthplace of the Apaches, and it is a fitting place for them too. Whenever I have looked at this grim and ghastly region I have not wondered that the Apaches are savage. In the distance the country is as white (but for some opallike spots) as though melted lard had been poured over it. It is as white as snow and hard as plaster. It is almost as slippery, too, as glass. There are no flourlike splotches anywhere, and the wind does not carry the curious whiteness into the air. All that is to be seen is alkali and its effect. The reservoirlike places in the dazzling white are actual reservoirs of alkali water. Some of them are but as large as a bucket in diameter, while others are 30 or 40 feet across.

I have strung 100 feet of riatas together and dropped it in and found no bottom. Neither cattle nor horses nor any living thing, so far as I know, will ever touch the water. They dare not, for a mouthful of it would kill. About the alkali pots and large reservoirs and scattered over the lava rocks, hot in the blazing sun, are the different forms of the cactus, and among all at times may be seen mottled reptiles crawling lazily in the heat.—San Francisco Examiner.

Drying Sheets and Tablecloths.

It is a good plan, always considered of course whether time and strength will allow, to take linen sheets and tablecloths from the line when about half dry, shake them and smooth them out, fold them once over and hang them over the line without any stretching or pulling. A couple of pins at a little distance from either edge will keep them in place. This gives more line room, which is often greatly needed and allows the pieces to dry in much better shape.

Many laundresses seem to think that clothes may be flung on the line in any way whatever, wrinkled, folded or something wrong about me. One day a little wear and tear of the articles while I was in a public restaurant a man themselves .-- New York Ledger.

Love's Perseverance.

Nothing succeeds like success, and a young man in Detroit is in a fair way to prove the truth of the axiom if perseverance is any sign of a duck's nest. He has been in love with a girl for a long time, and there has been no doubt in the minds of their respective friends that she has refused him more times than one. Not long ago he told his roommate that on that evening he was going to ask her again. At midnight when he returned he was so cheerful that his friend hardly thought it necessary to ask him about his success, but he did.

He shook his head. "What! She didn't refuse you, did

BEAUTIES OF SPRING.

NATURE'S TINTS THE BASIS OF MOST SPRING FABRICS.

Ashes of Roses Redivivus-Light Browns In Vogue Once More-The New Parasols Large, but Frail and Not Much Protection Against the Sun.

(Copyright, 1803, by American Press Association.]

F SPRING has brought us many tints that now harmonize so well with the bright spring days. We have the tender green of the springing grass, the purple of the violets, the gold of the daffodils, and the blue of the forgetmenot, and the delicate color of the lilac. And besides these we have rose leaf pink, apple blossom and the poetic ashes of roses.

Ashes of roses has sprung into a sudden popularity, as it well deserves to, for a lovelier shade was never produced. There is a blending of a dozen shades in it-pearl, white, pink, blue, violet, and ashes over all. It is the handsomest in broadcloth and cashmere, but it is more poetic in plain challis or crepe de chine. To be its handsomest it needs to be self trimmed—that is to say, to have plain bias ruffles, folds or pinked flounces of the same material, all lightly gathered and superposed.

I sive an illustration of a gown made of ashes of roses cashmere, with five pinked flounces over sapphire blue velvet, but if the velvet was to be replaced by cashmere it would be a more elegant gown - at least to my taste. It is trimmed with velvet ribbon bows and ends. The ashes of roses goes better with soft rush green than any other color, though some affect the voyante ma-

Another new color is seen in cloth and light spring woolens, and that is a pale snuff color with a hint of green somewhere. Browns are quite popular in the spring wools, but only in the lightest meetings of the church she attended to and most delicate shades. laid on smooth. Under the scallops at the edge is a plaited ruffle of white crepe lisse overlaid by narrow but very fine chantilly.

There are some honiton point parasols, with pink or maize silk beneath, and some of other white lace, but the preference seems to be for the lightest and airiest possible effects. Two or three were made of delicately tinted printed muslin, with the borders gathered or plaited for ruffles.

Naturally these frail though quite large parasols are small protection against the sun, but they make beautiful nebulous backgrounds for the face, and they cast a shade over the features that is always beneficial. They are dainty trifles, but they go very far toward making up the oft sung beauty of the summer girl.

I must merition one fact I have no ticed, and that is that there is an unusual amount of real lace seen upon millinery On one large poke shaped hat alone there was a falling frill of beautiful point lace nearly three inches deep, which was gathered so that it certainly held two yards. It drooped over the face. The hat was covered with velvet and jon quils. HENRIETTE ROUSSEAU.

THE PRESBYTERIANS.

PREPARING FOR THE GENERAL AS-SEMBLY AT WASHINGTON.

They Will Meet In a Historic Edifice and Revision of the Creed-Leaders of the Church.

One hundred and four times have the Presbyterians of the United States as represented by commissioners met in general assembly, and on May 18 600 commissioners from 217 presbyteries will in the New York Avenue Presbyterian church of Washington constitute the one hundred and fifth general assembly. The place of meeting is truly historic, the men in charge are thorough ly representative of their church and nation, and there is every indication that the gathering will be noted in history.

NEW YORK AVENUE CHURCH.

Not more than three assemblies at any rate have been more important, and possibly but two-the one which organized the church immediately after the United States became a nation and that of 1870 which completed the reunion of old school and new school, which had been separated about 33 years. At the coming assembly an earnest attempt will be made to give final settlement to certain questions which have troubled the church for several years, chief among them the revision of the confession of faith and the famous-one might almost say notorious-Briggs case.

The New York Avenue Presbyterian church is one of the historic places of Washington. The name was taken in 1859, when the old F Street and Second Presbyterian churches were united under the pastorate of Rev. Dr. Phineas D. the present edifice. In 1852 the old congregation welcomed the general assembly of that year. In the original congregation, Presidents Andrew Jackson, nincy Adams and Franklin Pierce were frequently present in their terms, and the attendance of the last named at the prayer meetings was a subject of frequent remark. James Buchanan occupied a pew there regularly, and Abraham Lincoln made it his religious home so far as he had any. Today it has a very large proportion of eminent officials among its attendants. Nevertheless when Dr. Bartlett was called to the pastorate in 1882, the membership was but a few over 500. It rapidly increased to 2,000, and the original church has founded two others, the Church of the Covenant and the Gurley Memorial, and sustains two flourishing missions. William Alvin Bartlett was born Dec. 4, 1832, in Binghamton, N. Y., and was graduated from Hamilton college in 1852, since which time his career has been one of extraordinary activity. Among of his classmates and intimates at college were the present Justice Merwin of the supreme bench of New York, Rev. Mr. Cleveland, the president's brother, Charles Dudley Warner and Professor Fisk of Cornell, and though Bartlett was the youngest (but 19 when he graduated) all the others conceded him the honors of the class, and he has since worn the Phi Beta Kappa badge on his watch chain.

While still a minor he was made acting professor of Greek, Latin and elocution at the institution near Staunton, Va. A year later he entered Union Theological seminary, New York, and after graduating there with high honors took a course in Halle and Berlin, devoting special attention to what is now called higher criticism. He has held pastorate sat Owego, N. Y., Brooklyn, Chicago and Indianapolis, and has done an immense amount of outside work, such as lecturing, writing and speaking in support of the war for the Union. He had one brother, a major, killed in the last movement of the Army of the Potomac, and another, General J. J. Bartlett, was recently buried at Arlington as an honored veteran. Rev. Dr. William C. Young of Kentucky, who will preach the opening sermon, is also a man of varied experience born April 28, 1842, in Danville, Ky., his father being the Rev. Dr. John C. Young, and his mother, Cornelia, a daughter of the eminent John J. Crittenden. Center college at Danville had and in 1830 Dr. John C. Young was elected president. He died in 1857, having been president 27 years, and 31 years later the trustees elected his son, Dr. William, as president. Though he entered on the duties late that year his formal Discuss the Case of Dr. Briggs and the inauguration was postponed to the seventieth anniversary of the founding of the college. Oct. 9, 1889, was indeed a proud day in the history of Danville and Cen-After his graduation there in 1859 Dr.

Young passed some years in teaching and reading, then took a complete theological course, traveled some time in Palestine, filled pastofates in various places -one being a seven years' charge at Fullerton Avenue church, Chicago-whence he returned to his native state and was for eight year pastor of the Central Presbyterian church of Louisville. Thence he went to take charge of his alma mater. When the general assembly convened at Portland, Or., last year, an unusually spirited contest ensued over the choice of a moderator. Eight candi dates were placed in nomination, and on the third ballot Dr. Young received 262 of the 525 votes. Having served most acceptably as moderator there, he is the proper official to open the proceedings at Washington. It is estimated that the assembly will sit for 12 days, with morning and afternoon sessions only, unless the business shall press toward the close. Revision of the creed must be settled this year, and the Briggs case may be. After many sent in their overtures, and at Portland the assembly referred 28 of these overtures to the presbyteries for final action. First in popular interest is the proposed change in chapter 10, section 3, so that it will read thus:

Infants dying in infancy and all other persons not guilty of actual transgression are in-cluded in the election of grace and are regenerated and saved by Christ through the Spirit who worketh when and where and how he pleaseth. • • So also are all other elect persons who are not outwardly called by the

This is to be construed in connection with these words elsewhere:

The rest of mankind God saw fit, according to the unsear hable counsel of his will, where-by he extendeth or withholdeth mercy as he pleaseth, not to elect unto everlasting life, and them hath he ordained to dishonor and wrath for the sin, to the praise of his glorious justice yet hath he no pleasure in the death of the wicked nor is it his decree, but the wickedness of their own hearts, which restaineth and hin-dereth them from accepting the free offer of his grace made in the gospel

All the world knows the history of the Briggs case. It is therefore only necessary to summarize it and present the issue as it will come before the assembly. Dr. Charles Augustus Briggs, professor in Union Theological seminary and as a stress laid upon apparently trivial matpreacher amenable directly to the New ters in the preceding remarks; but those York city presbytery, adopted the views Gurley, who took the lead in building of the German school and taught them freely to his classes. He held that the Bible is not infallible, but contains many errors; that reason is the court of last of the season, of which she will have tull control resort in Biblical as in other questions: She also engaged a that those who reject the Bible may still have a chance, and many other so called FIRST-CLASS liberal ideas. After due formalities the case went before the general assembly at Portland and was referred back to the New York presbytery. That body, 99 ministers and 32 elders voting, acquitted Dr. Briggson every one of the six charges by majorities ranging from 6 to 21.

It appears, therefore, that a man may be an acceptable Presbyterian preacher in New York city while holding and preaching the following tenets: First-That reason is a fountain of divine authority which may and often does savingly enlighten men, even such as reject the Bibli and the way of salvation through the media tion and sacrifice of the Son of God. Vote, 68 to 60.

Second-That the church is a fountain of divine authority, which, apart from the holy Scripture, may and does savingly enlighte men. Vote, 71 to 55. Third-That errors existed in the original text of the holy Scripture as it came from its au-thors. Vote, 68 to 61. Fourth-That Moses is not the author of the Pentateuch. Vote, 72 to 53. Fifth-That Isaiah is not the author of half the book that bears his name. Vote, 70 to 49. Sixth—That sanctification is not complete at Bear in mind that the presbytery did not by its vote and the general assembly if it acquits will not declare these things true. They will simply declare that one may hold and teach them and still be will conviction carry any reflection upon the convicted as a man. It will simply mean that so long as he so teaches his home is somewhere else than in the Presbyterian church. He also set forth with great detail that he believed the Bible to contain the word of God and considerably more, and that Christ is not the Son of God in the usually accepted sense, but in-well, in a sense that the ordinary layman has never been able to understand. And yet, despite these views, certainly as broad as any held by Dr. Channing or James Freeman Clarke, views certainly condemned by every souncil which has considered them since Hartford, of Hartford, Conn.; that of Nice, A. Dr. Goldstein will be in Stanford Monday to remain a few days only. Eye sight s priceless and the popular opinion that the use of glasses should be postponed as long as possible is erroneous. As soon as unpleasant feelings denote approach of failing sight, glasses should be resorted to at once, as the longer the eyes are years' discussion various presbyteries deprived of the aid of that which they need, and consequently subjected to strain, the more rapid will be the changes as the eye becomes developed. The market is flooded with low priced spectacles, which have imperfect lenses, and are therefore a great injury to the eye. The important part of a pair of spectacles is the part comprising the frames, and naturally of more importance are the lenses they contain. His glasses are fitted with the finest spheroidal convex and concave lenses, accurately measured and properly adjusted to the frame, preventing irritation and strain of the eye. There is a great public need for information regarding the proper selection of spectacles and care of the eyes. A large proportion of habitual weak eye sight may be entirely remedied by the use of a carefully adjusted glass to assist the sight and thereby remove the undue strain to which the eye under certain conditions is subjected. Those whose eyes are in a condition of perfect health will fail to understand adequately the who have suffered from any defect or weakress of the eyes will comprehend at once the great importance of the seemingly most insignificant point mertioned. The former class of individuals, however, should have quite as much intion is worth a pound of cure," can find no more fit application than in the care of the eyes.
